Students voice protest to location of printing press

By John Samuel Baker

Staff Writer

Students and faculty in the departments of mechanical engineering and aeronautical engineering are voicing opposition to a proposal recommending installation of a printing press in the campus aerohangar.

Rockwell International Corporation donated the million-dollar printing press to the graphic communication department, but the university has had difficulty finding a location for it.

Malcom Wilson, interim vice president of academic affairs, proposed to install the press in the aerohangar.

Ronald L. Mussulman, mechanical engineering department head, and E. Robert Woods, aeronautical engineering department head, said they are opposed to installing the press in the hangar because of potential problems it might create for aeronautical and mechanical engineering students who use the building for experiments.

More than 20 mechanical and aeronautical engineering students met Sunday to draft a petition they will distribute to other students within their majors. The petition lists reasons why the press should not be located in the hangar.

Bob Bollinger, an aeronautical engineering major who organized the student meeting and drew up the petition, said, "We've only got two days and then dead week to fight this proposal. That's not much time at all."

Chuck Canright, an aeronautical engineering senior who spoke out several times at the meeting, said it seemed a Nov. 20 Mustang Daily article led people to believe there's a lot of unused space up at the aero lab. "Our purpose in this petition is to say that it is being used."

Recently, Cal Poly received a grant from the National Science Foundation to pay for half of the $28,000 cost of the Sting Balance Measurement System. This sensitive device measures lift and drag forces on a wind tunnel model in the wind tunnel, located in the hangar.

Canright said: "Having the printing press so close to the Sting would render it and all wind tunnel operations useless because of the vibrations created by the press. Any outside influence can destroy data received from the device."

Harvey Levenson, graphic communication department head, said schedules could be agreed on to allow the press to operate at times when aero equipment is not being used. He said, "It's a very solid piece of equipment. Vibration doesn't seem to be a problem."

Dave McKenna, an engineering graduate student, said having the press in the hangar might not be a problem, but he expects some research to be done first to prove that housing the press there would not be disastrous to the aero equipment.

"First it should be proved if the press will not interfere with the simulation computers," he said. "The press and the computers use the same power source, and power surges and spikes caused by the press could damage the computers or interfere with operation."

Levenson said, "I heard we would have a separate power source."

Executive Dean Doug Gerard, in charge of university capital outlay, was not available at press time to provide information on the technical aspects of the press and the hangar's capability to house it. When contacted last week, Gerard said the hangar

Barclays pulls out of South Africa

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Barclays Bank of Britain, citing financial and political pressure, said Monday it sold its last shares in its South African affiliate for about $230 million. It was the biggest divestment yet by a foreign company.

A consortium of South African companies signed the deal last week to buy Barclays' shares in Barclays National Bank of South Africa, the country's largest commercial bank.

"The Barclays PLC sale of shares must have an impact on the South African economy. It is certainly not a perilous matter, but it is cause for serious concern in terms of psychological impact," Basil Hersov, chairman of Barclays National, told a news conference.

The London-based Barclays Bank PLC once owned 100 percent of the local affiliate but since 1973 had reduced its share to 40.4 percent. Its final pullout is the first by a major British company but follows withdrawal by numerous American companies, most recently General Motors, Kodak and IBM.

The value of the divestment and number of employees involved — 26,000 — made it the largest so far. However, officials of the local affiliate said the existing staff and operations will be maintained.

South African bankers, speaking on condition of anonymity, said they feared Barclays' withdrawal would encourage pullouts by other British companies. Britain is the largest foreign investor in South Africa, with $8.5 billion, compared to about $1.3 billion in American investments.

"Barclays are longstanding friends of South Africa," said local managing director Chris Ball. "They're not doing this to punish South Africa. They're doing it because they're under political pressure which is converting into financial pressure."

In London, Barclays spokesman Geoffrey Kelly said the sale was made chiefly because of the affiliate's poor economic performance and unfavorable prospects for the South African economy.

But he told The Associated Press, "I think certainly political factors come into it."

"The lack of progress toward ending apartheid has itself had impact on the South African economy," he said. "It is also true that the threat to our business in the U.K. and the U.S. is one of the factors, but not the prime factor."

In Britain, anti-apartheid groups have protested outside Barclays' branches to push for divestment.

"Neither South Africa's balance of payments nor its foreign exchange reserves will be affected by the transaction," said Gerhard de Kock, governor of South Africa's Reserve Bank.

Christmas hype may save lives

Turkeys running for cover

By Chris Barks

Staff Writer

Well, it's that time of the year again. Time to deck the halls, jingle those bells, and max out your Visa, right? Wrong. Forget the fact that the stores have had their aluminum trees and plastic poinsettias in place for three weeks already. Ignore those commercials that would have you believe there are only five shopping days left. Wake up and smell the turkey, gang. It's Thanksgiving.

Each year, it seems, Thanksgiving becomes more and more overshadowed by Christmas. People have developed a tendency to play down the importance and tradition of this once-great holiday, stifled

Giving thanks for small favors

Everybody is getting ready to go home and celebrate the Thanksgiving holiday. But, in the back of everybody's mind is the nagging thought that just a few days after returning is my birthday. At first I was going to print a list of all the things I wanted for my birthday (You know, the usual: a pair of Masters of the Universe bedroom slippers, a redhead, a BMW). Then I got to thinking that, heck, I would accept just about anything that's legal in the state of California. So instead I have come up with a list of the 29 most horrible things that could happen to someone (namely me) on their birthday.

1)Waking up next to Oprah Winfrey.

2)Being stuck in an elevator with Fidel Castro and Yoko Ono. (Fidel Castro would smell like 14 cigars; Yoko Ono would just smell.)

3)Having a cup of coffee and a piece of hot fudge cake at Bob's Big Boy with Willard Scott.

4)Rula Lenska throwing up on your shoes.

5)Being reincarnated as Herve Villechaize.

6)Andrew Wyeth hung next to your bed.

7)Being on a trip and finding all your luggage had been switched with Bonnie Franklin's.

8)Sharing a cab with Ernest Borgnine and the Judds.

9)Fidel Castro hanging Ricky Schroeder next to your bed (who would, in time, begin to smell).

FOOD FOR THOUGHT

Kenneth Dintzer

10)Being nude in front of your grandparents and Bob Hope.

11)Fernando Lamas, Fernando Valenzuela, William F. Buckley, and the Mandrell sisters discussing Jack Kerouac over sherry whilst sitting on your mauve loveseat.

12)Finding Luciano Pavarotti, Fidel Castro and Bea Arthur taking a bubble bath together in your gold-plated sunken tub.

13)Julie and David Eisenhower at a Run-DMC concert wearing nothing but fezes.

14)Waking up in the middle of the night and finding Phil Donahue shaving his arms in your bathroom.

15)Being locked in Zsa Zsa Gabor's wig closet.

16)Being snowed in in a remote mountain cabin with Tony Orlando, Barbara Mandrell, Florence Henderson and the entire cast from the Love Boat (except Gopher, who is now in Congress). They all, indeed, would begin to smell.

17)Ed McMahon spontaneously combusting in your living room.

18)Brooke Shields coughing up fur balls during your formal, invite-only, dinner party.

19)Frank Sinatra.

20)Fidel Castro and Kevin Swanson doing a very bad soft shoe to "Sonny Boy."

21)Lt. Uhura, Mr. Sulu and Chekhov (the Russian author) sipping banana daiquiris and eating Brie in Bonnie Franklin's luggage.

22)Catching Sandra Day O'Connor and Harry Morgan setting small animals on fire in your front yard.

23)Waking up and finding that you're really Mackenzie Phillips.

24)Finding Judge Wapner and Rusty the Bailiff slow dancing to "Color My World" on the head of a pin.

25)Drew Barrymore, John Houseman, Dick Butkus and Marla Gibbs swatting Pat Harrington and Amy Carter with spatulas in your perky yellow breakfast nook.

26)Vic Tayback, Noriyuki "Pat" Morita and Randy Mantooth reciting the first 1,000 prime numbers.

27)Tony Geary, Fred MacMurray, Mamie Eisenhower and Johann Sebastian Bach bidding on Nagel paintings at open auction.

28)Being visited by the ghosts of Freddie Prinze, Millard Fillmore and Howard Jarvis on Christmas day and having them bring you Bonnie Franklin's luggage.

29)Being trapped on the Disneyland Magic Teacups with Idi Amin, Edie Gormet and Rutherford B. Hayes.

letters to the editor

Disabled students tram
an invaluable asset

Editor — I would like to thank you for your article regarding inter-campus vehicular traffic on the hour. Vehicles have indeed become a problem and a hazard to those attempting to get to class. I would like to point out, however, your error in labeling the DSS (Disabled Student Services) tram as a major offender. On the contrary, the tram provides an invaluable service to the disabled (permanent and temporary) on this campus. Have you ever tried to maneuver on this campus without crutches or a brace? Obviously not. Besides dodging the inconsiderate skateboarders and bicyclists on the sidewalk, there are little things like stairs and hills to contend with. Try to get from the Business Building to the Fisher Science Building in a mere 10 minutes.

Due to a recent injury, I am in an ankle cast. For the first two weeks, I was confined to crutches. I was able to make it to all of my classes (or at least I was given the opportunity!) thanks to the DSS and their "reckless" tram. You mentioned the tram was only seen around the top of the hour — how astute. When else do people go to classes?

This is not a letter asking sympathy for the disabled, but rather a letter in praise of Disabled Student Services for providing services that emphasize the able in disabled.

Peres to report role in Iran deal

JERUSALEM (AP) — Foreign Minister Shimon Peres tried Monday to defuse pressure on the Israeli government to disclose its role in shipping U.S. arms to Iran, promising to report to a watchdog subcommittee in Parliament.

He flatly refused, however, to give information about any Iranian arms deal when he appeared before the Foreign Affairs and Security Committee, an unwieldy, 26-member body where deliberations are rarely kept secret.

He promised instead to brief the six-member Subcommittee on Armed Services.

The development came amid concern that an angry U.S. Congress could make Israel a scapegoat for the U.S. administration's sales.

The political uproar in the United States over the arms shipments has just begun to spread to Israel, where many Israelis accept that arms deals are not for public debate.

Border guards shoot man at wall

BERLIN (AP) — East German border guards fired dozens of shots Monday at a young man trying to climb over the Berlin Wall to the West and he fell to the ground covered with blood, Western authorities said. They said he probably died.

Another East German succeeded Monday in escaping to the West by setting out on a raft into the Baltic Sea, where he was picked up by a passing ship, West German police said.

The 36-year-old man on the raft identified himself as a nephew of Karl-Eduard von Schnitzler, Communist East Germany's propaganda chief and the leading commentator on state-run television, sources told The Associated Press.

Serra supporters answer charges

MONTEREY (AP) — The Roman Catholic Diocese, stepping up a campaign to have Father Junipero Serra canonized, released a report Monday responding to critics who claim he enslaved and whipped Indians while founding California's mission system in the 18th century.

Supporters of the sainthood campaign hope the 90-page report will clear the way for Pope John Paul II to beatify Serra next fall during a visit to the Carmel Mission.

Serra was declared "venerable" last year, the first of three steps to canonization. Beatification is a Vatican finding that a miracle took place through a prayer of intercession to a candidate. Sainthood could follow upon verification of a second miracle, although the pope can dispense with the requirement for either miracle.

was declared an inadequate instructional building by the state Department of Finance. Therefore, all instructional activities will be redirected to the new engineering building. Gerard also said housing the press in the aerohangar would have the least impact on Cal Poly programs.

McKenna estimated the cost of the computers and measuring devices in the lab to be more than $500,000.

Experiments with the Sting and the computer needed to tabulate its data are partly funded by the aeronautical engineering department's lottery allocation. The department considers the lab equipment to be of major importance.

Lee Peron, a senior aeronautical engineering major, said if the press is operated in the hangar there will be no space to build the first human-powered helicopter — a project which has attracted the attention of McDonnell Douglas and Smithsonian magazine.

Levenson said the press requires floor space about 70 feet long and 24 feet wide. "I was told there was so much space that we could choose from three different places," he added.

Canright said students must voice their concern even though he's not sure how much good it will do because the faculty make the decisions.

Levenson said the decision of where to house the press will actually be made at the executive level, between university deans and Cal Poly President Warren Baker.

Levenson said he hopes people who are coming out against housing the press in the hangar are being objective rather than emotional. "I'm fully sensitive to the needs of other people. I didn't know there was this problem," he said.

Accommodating Rockwell would have wide implications for the university as a whole, Levenson said, adding, "Once they come in with this level of support, it would seem Rockwell is prepared to provide support in other areas."

The press is now stored in pieces in the Research Development Center. Rockwell has agreed to assemble the press when a location is designated.

The press is scheduled to be installed and operating by Jan. 1.

States report influx of homeless

By the Associated Press

They are the new poor. Across the country, organizations that are preparing Thanksgiving meals for the needy say they are struck by increasing numbers of families and youngsters who are calling for help.

In Kansas City and Phoenix, in Chicago and Little Rock, the gyms, churches and armories where the poor and lonely gather for Thanksgiving will be filled this year with the sounds of children.

In the farm and oil belts, the problem is especially pronounced.

"The typical person we're working with now, compared to maybe a year or two years ago, are the new unemployed," said Jess L. Duncan of the Salvation Army in New Orleans.

"The trend we see is the number of intact families thrown into homelessness," said Mike Moreau of New Orleans' Traveler's Aid. "Three or four years ago, that wasn't a problem." In Kansas City, Mo., the director of the City Union Mission said people from farms and rural towns are increasingly among the homeless.

"I think it has to do with the farm economy," said the Rev. Maurice Vanderberg. "Farms don't require the manpower they used to."

In Little Rock, Ark., where restaurant owner Robert McIntosh gave away 500 baskets of free food last year, more than 2,000 people signed up for the baskets this year.

"I have seen lots of hard times, but this beats them all," he said.

In Phoenix, Ariz., the St. Vincent de Paul Society is preparing 2,500 dinners, up from 1,500 last year.

"People are coming to Phoenix for the weather," said spokeswoman Teresa Coury-Davia. "It's all over the newspapers that Arizona is the place with a lot of jobs."

But many people arrive and find out they are not qualified for the work available, she said.

Prosperous Southern states report the same problem. Social agencies are receiving an unusual number of pleas from families who came seeking work, found they didn't have the right skills, and wound up living in cardboard boxes or cars.

"They are just moving from one state to another and hoping they can find that job," said Maj. Herb Bergen at the Salvation Army Post in Knoxville, Tenn. "Some of these people are not skilled in anything and they just fall through the cracks again when they get in your community."

The problem is not limited to the Sun Belt. In Chicago, steel plant closings boosted the number of hungry.

"I would say we're seeing an influx of new poor," said Sister Donna Marie Preston of the Parish Cooperative Social Service Center. "We're beginning to see those people who have been laid off some time ago but have used up their savings."

In Los Angeles, 3,000 people are expected at the Union Rescue Mission, about the same number as last year. But the mission, which helps homeless men, is expecting more women and children than in years past.

Cyclists and Sierra Club clash over use of trails

These photos of the Penguin Club riders were taken in the area behind the Horse Unit.

During the past decade members of the campus motorcycle club, the Cal Poly Penguins, have continuously battled the Sierra Club over the use of wilderness trails for off-road riding.

The Penguins have been accused by the Sierra Club of misusing the trails in the area around Pozo, which is located about 28 miles east of Santa Margarita. Sierra Club members contend motorcycle riders destroy vegetation, disrupting and threatening the lives of the animals in the forest. According to Ellen Bradford, a member of the Sierra Club, "The people that go out and ride in the forest just don't care about the damage they do to the environment. We want to stop that abuse."

The Penguins reject the image of off-road cyclists as environmental terrorists, saying that they respect the areas they ride in. Penguin Vice President Brent Lottman said, "Our group doesn't ride off the trails, and we don't make new trails unless we're authorized." In fact, he said, one of the reasons the club goes out is to appreciate the natural scenery.

The most recent controversy is centered on the use of a trail which runs through the proposed Garcia Mountain Wilderness area. In a recent Sierra Club newsletter, member Lee Wilson wrote: "Our plans for the Garcia Mountain Wilderness involve the elimination of use by the motorcycle people of the trail ... The cyclists are not short on routes, they have all the forest lands

an ambulance screeches to a stop at the scene of a two-car, head-on collision. Two trained medics treat the critically injured victims and transport them to the nearest hospital. Another call is over and three more lives are saved.

The two medics are not from "Emergency" Squad 51 or "St. Elsewhere," they are full-time Cal Poly students gaining hands-on medical experience by working for the San Luis Ambulance Service. Because there is no school of medicine at Cal Poly, these few dedicated students combine majors such as biology, biochemistry and physical education with 24-, 48- and 72-hour shifts as ambulance drivers to get a foot in the door of medical school.

Scott Fox, who is majoring both in biology and biochemistry, has 16 units this quarter and works full-time as an ambulance driver. Full-time at the San Luis Ambulance Service doesn't entail a nine-to-five work week; Fox checks in at 8 a.m. Saturday and doesn't leave until 8 a.m. Tuesday.

"I've been working full-time with 72-hour shifts for one-and-a-half years out of my three years as an ambulance driver in San Luis Obispo, and even though some of the shifts are quiet, some can be real hectic," said Fox, who eventually plans to become a physician.

Just to show how fast-paced some of the shifts are, Fox got an emergency call in the middle of this Mustang Daily interview, and that night will be a hard one for Fox to forget. He and his partner arrived on the scene of head-on, hit-and-run accident in Avila Beach.

"Two 17-year-old girls were in one car and the person in the other car took off," said Fox. "It's very disheartening to treat two innocent victims for critical injuries and know someone took off without facing up to a big mistake."

Kim Gimenez, a part-time ambulance driver for San Luis Ambulance Service and a full-time student at Cal Poly, recalled a fatal accident that happened earlier this fall. Working a 24-hour weekend shift, Gimenez arrived to a party at Pirate's Cove too late, as an 18-year-old Cal Poly freshman fell to his death off the edge of a cliff. Gimenez said the saddest part of all was that this victim was due to start his first college classes the next week.

"Driving through traffic you get a sense of power when people pull over for you, but when you get to a scene like the one at Pirate's Cove — you can feel so helpless," said Gimenez, who will also go on to medical school after graduation.

A double major in physical education and biochemistry, Gimenez is setting aside plenty of time for medical school to better her chances of becoming an emergency room doctor or working in the field of cardiology. Gimenez has been getting a taste of the type of emergency room stress she will encounter by dealing with the split-second emergency calls of driving an ambulance.

100-120 calls per ambulance unit, Fox and Giminez describe similar ways to handle job stress.

"Usually the adrenaline carries you through, but I have gotten sick to my stomach before at the emergency room," said Fox.

"After a while we have to joke about things a lot more, and it may be a morbid sense of humor, but it helps us deal with the stress of our shifts."

Giminez said, "You know what you have to do. You pull away and try to become unattached, and there is a weird sense of humor around here."

Talking about things — even in a joking manner — to a fellow worker, an understanding roommate or just a friend helps these young ambulance drivers cope with the pressure to save lives. Expectations are high in the medical business, and ambulance drivers are no exception, especially when the San Luis Ambulance company is the primary medical service to the whole city.

"The San Luis Ambulance Service is unique. We are the center hub of a whole wheel, because this company also covers areas like Morro Bay, Pismo Beach and Paso Robles," said Fox. "There is no paramedic program in this county, so they train us with extra pharmacology, and it just becomes a matter of title."

Fox and Giminez didn't just apply for their ambulance jobs, they had to pass certain medical courses. Both medics had to take Emergency Medical Training 1 (EMT 1) at Cuesta College, which is the course of basic life support and a prerequisite for ambulance drivers. Fox went through the next level, EMT 2, which is offered by the Emergency Medical Service Agency, and he's certified in advanced cardiac life support. EMT 3 involves paramedic training, which requires more schooling and teaches more aggressive medical care, said Fox.

"EMT 1 is basic first aid, but it gave me more confidence and a sense of understanding in emergency situations," said Fox. "My brother is a P.E. major at Fresno State and he took EMT 1 just to learn the practical aspects of first aid."

Giminez, who's still thinking about devoting 450 hours to the EMT 2 course, said, "I took the EMT 1 class at Cuesta for my job, but also because of the desire to help people."

Coming to the aid of people in emergency situations is what a medic's job is all about, but Fox and Giminez also praise their working conditions.

"Most of us at the station are between the ages of 21 and 25, so even though we have different backgrounds, we can relate," said Fox.

"Lots of time and energy are put into this kind of job," said Giminez. "With our long shifts, we live with the people at the station, and believe me, there is never a dull moment."

by the pre-Christmas overkill. Rumor has it that the turkey community is behind this effort to denigrate Thanksgiving.

Consider, if you will, the lowly turkey. According to local turkey rancher Sam English, turkeys are incredibly stupid. How stupid are they? They are so stupid, said English, that they have been known to drown in rainstorms because they don't know when to shut their beaks. However, English said, with a note of pride in his voice, "It's never happened to my turkeys."

Another black mark against the turkey is his glaring lack of physical appeal. In other words, turkeys are not cute. No one has a turkey collection. People may collect stuffed bears or ceramic frogs, but not turkeys. This bird is so lacking in status that one of the definitions of "turkey" in Webster's Third International Dictionary is: "Something that has a conspicuous lack of success."

However, if the latest reports are correct, the turkeys are having a measure of success in their campaign to make America forget Thanksgiving. They appear to have placed turkeys in key positions in media and business, from which they hope to work consumers into a frenzy of Christmas cheer as early as the middle of October, thereby taking the momentum out of Thanksgiving. It is unclear just how far these birds are willing to go in their effort to avoid the chopping block.

An informal poll of several local markets has revealed that turkey sales are down this year. This continues a trend that started about four years ago, according to local butcher Burt Galvin. "It just seems like less people are bothering with the big feast," he said. "Heck, I know people who eat quiche on Thanksgiving these days."

Another indication that the turkeys may be having some success is the way many students are spending the holiday. Rather than heading home to be with their families and enjoy a big Thanksgiving dinner, students are using the time off to take mini-vacations. For instance, Andrea Martinez, an animal science major, is traveling to Mexico. "I can spend the Christmas holidays with my family," she said. "This is the perfect time to take a break."

Hudson Cameron, architectural engineering major, said, "Thanksgiving isn't as big a deal as it used to be. Mashing the potatoes and basting the turkey for 34 hours just isn't worth it. I'm going to take a road trip somewhere."

If the turkeys meet their objective, Thanksgiving will become one of those "holidays" when only the banks and the post office are closed, and the wholesale slaughter of turkeys will come to an end. However, with the recent recognition of turkey meat as a prime source of low-fat nutrition, the poultry community may have a new problem on their hands. Or wings, rather.

Women's soccer club wins league tournament

By Dan Ruthemeyer
Sports Editor

Taking two games from league powerhouse Cal State Northridge, the women's soccer club won five straight games in Northridge during the weekend to win its league championship.

The Mustangs had lost to the Matadors twice earlier this season, but on Saturday and Sunday they came out and got more than their share of revenge.

Getting goals from Caryn McNamee and Tammy Schoniger on Saturday, the Mustangs were able to edge the Matadors and be in good shape for Sunday's games.

Earlier on Saturday, the Mustangs had picked up shutout victories over Biola and USC, both by 3-0 scores.

Against Biola, the Mustangs got two goals from Lisa Shipley and one from Schoniger, while McNamee and Heather Harvey found their way into the scoring column against USC.

Harvey's goal, which came off a shot fired off the right wing, was her first of the season.

When the Mustangs came out for their semifinal game on Sunday against San Diego State, they got single goals out of Schoniger, McNamee and Lisa Best to pick up a 3-0 win. Meanwhile, Northridge defeated UCLA in its semifinal game to earn the right to play the Mustangs.

Going into the final game against Northridge, the Mustangs were mentally prepared, said assistant coach Rod Kalpakoff.

"They were pretty psyched," he said.

"Morale-wise we were above every other team out there. It was not only the players on the field but those on the bench."

Schoniger played strong in the final game, scoring three of Poly's four goals in their 4-2 win. The strong performance gave Schoniger six goals and one assist on the weekend, while McNamee finished the two-day tournament with five goals and three assists.

McNamee's assists all went to Schoniger, who returned the favor to her teammate by feeding her with an assist.

Kalpakoff said the Mustangs' performance as a team was their best of the year, and that two of the three goals given up shouldn't have been scored.

Of the two goals, he said, one was scored on a corner kick and the other on a penalty kick. He said the team had practiced defending the Northridge corner kick earlier in the week, because in the two losses to the Matadors the Mustangs had trouble with the corner kick.

But whether the goals could have been prevented or not, the Mustangs still outscored their opponents 15-3 during the weekend, and the only goals given up were to Northridge.

Finishing out the season as the top Mustang scorers were McNamee, who had 14 goals and seven assists, and Schoniger, who added 10 goals and six assists.

McNamee and Jennifer Drumm were named to the league's first team, while Schoniger, Kathy Waldal, Meg Harding and goalkeeper Liz Pawek received second team honors.

Crew club holds first regatta of season

By Mike Shoup
Special to the Daily

A new coach, old boats and their first home regatta combined Saturday to remind the Cal Poly crew team members that they are still young.

Out of 11 races, the men's lightweight eight-man boat was the only Cal Poly crew to finish first against teams from St. Mary's College of Moraga and Cal State Sacramento for the 2,850-meter course at Santa Margarita Lake.

This is the first full year of competition for the 140-member club, and according to head coach Steve Marschke, the club knew from last year that its chances of taking the regatta were slim. "I had to give them a pep down talk before the race," he said.

In rowing, there are both women's and men's divisions, and each of these are divided by weight (heavyweight and lightweight) and experience (novice, varsity, junior varsity, and freshmen).

Although it is inexperienced, the club has enough people to fill almost all the races, except for freshmen and junior varsity divisions. According to Wayne Rickert, assistant coach, "Cal Poly's advantage is their number."

Although a women's crew won an unofficial race last year, the men's eight-man was the first sanctioned race ever won by a Cal Poly crew. The team of Matt Hanko, John McCarthy, Blake Max, Marcos Amaya, Mitch Gardner, Tony Celebrini, Mike McNeill, Dave Houghton and Ann Nebiker as coxswain stroked to a time of 10:36, beating out Sacramento's 10:37 finish.

Marschke and Rickert agreed that both the women's and men's varsity 8-man boats have the ability to become competitive. On Saturday, the women "showed that they were in league with

Cal Poly lacrosse team downs alumni, 4-3

By Julie Jordan
Staff Writer

In a hard-fought battle in which neither team really dominated, the Cal Poly lacrosse team came out on top of the alumni team 4-3 in Mustang Stadium on Saturday.

"Most of the alumni still play on different club teams," said Sean Tuite, president of the Lacrosse Club. "It's not like they are out of shape or something."

The alumni team, made up of past Mustang starters, was a virtual all-star team that went into the game with the attitude that they could come up with the win, said Dickie Abono, a 1985 graduate and previous four-year member of the team. "We thought we could win by finesse, but they really surprised us," he said.

Showing a lot of hustle and aggressiveness, Cal Poly scored first on an assist by Jeff Goronea to Mike Campana in the first quarter. This did not last long, however, as the alumnus Keola Caindec countered with a goal of his own in the second quarter.

Kyle Marshall, a Cal Poly third-year midfielder, made an unassisted goal to give the Mustangs the lead, but an alumni goal by Dickie Abono tied the score once again before the half. "We really did a good job of controlling the ball and this enabled us to put the ball in the net," said Marshall.

The start of the second half was a see-saw battle, as the ball was constantly moved up and down the field by both teams. It was not until the final minutes of the third quarter that the alumni team took the lead, 3-2.

The Mustangs just plain out-hustled the alumni in the final quarter of play, immediately scoring to tie the game. They kept the pressure on, and when the ball did get into their side of the field, great saves by Mustang goalie Mark Matthias prevented the alumni from scoring.

With four minutes left in the

Lakers again championship caliber with improved bench

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — Off to a 9-1 start, the Los Angeles Lakers look just as fast as when they raced away with NBA titles three times in the past seven years — and a lot of the credit goes to improved bench strength.

Two more victories will match the team's record for its best season start, which was set last season.

After a season-opening loss at Houston, the Lakers had a relatively easy schedule in winning the next eight games, before meeting Milwaukee, one of the Eastern Conference powers, Sunday night. But with the help of 45 points from their substitutes, the Lakers won 127-117.

Gone from the front line are Maurice Lucas, Mitch Kupchak and Larry Spriggs, who were ineffective or unused during the playoffs.

The new reserves who are making strong contributions are backup center Frank Brickowski, guard Wes Matthews and rookie Billy Thompson, with second-year pro A.C. Green showing more of the promise he carried as the team's No. 1 draft pick a year ago. Green didn't play in the Houston playoff series a year ago, won by the Rockets, 4 games to 1.

One player who thinks the Lakers are back to championship form is Milwaukee center Jack Sikma, who was held to five rebounds and six points Sunday.

"I think when Houston beat them last year, there was a tendency to say they lost a step," he said. "However, they've gotten off to a great start this year and they've still got an outstanding team. It's going to take a great team to beat them."

the Sacramento and St. Mary's women," said Marschke.

However, the men's team was not without its problems, as during the heavyweight eight-man race when an oar lock broke, preventing one crew member from contributing his part in powering the craft.

Although this regatta was official, its primary purpose was to show the coaches what work has to be done with their teams.

While the regatta ran smooth, the Cal Poly club ran into trouble finding teams to compete.

According to Marschke, almost all the California-based crew teams that could compete were called, but most of them declined because of Cal Poly's inexperience.

Because Cal Poly starts about three weeks later than most schools, less actual water time has been spent in the shells. Marschke noted that up until about 11 practices ago, most of the novices had never been in a shell; they had been working out in a barge.

game, Pete Leonardi scored for Cal Poly what turned out to be the winning goal on Goronea's second assist of the day. "We played team rather than individual ball and I think that it showed in this victory," said Goronea.

Bob Jones, a 1984 graduate and present member of the Coast Lacrosse Club in Southern California, said that the Mustangs have a lot of talent this year and really hustle on the field. He added, "We are older, and just cannot run as well as we used to."

Bears' McMahon may be out rest of season

LAKE FOREST, Ill. (AP) — Quarterback Jim McMahon could be out for the remainder of the NFL season after his shoulder injury was aggravated when a Green Bay lineman slammed him to the turf, Chicago Bears Coach Mike Ditka said Monday.

"I doubt if we will have his services the rest of the year," Ditka said. "He has shoulder discomfort. It's all up to the doctors in Los Angeles."

McMahon was scheduled to leave for Los Angeles on Tuesday and see Dr. Frank Jobe, an orthopedist who specializes in elbows and shoulders.

In the second quarter of Sunday's 12-10 home victory, McMahon was tossed to the ground by Green Bay nose tackle Charles Martin, who was ejected from the game for the personal foul by referee Jerry Markbreit.

"The ball had been thrown, the quarterback was at rest and he (Martin) came in and took the quarterback, picked him up and stuffed him," Markbreit said.

McMahon, making his first start in nearly a month because of a rotator cuff tear in his right throwing shoulder, landed on the injured shoulder.

"I'm sure the flagrant foul affected him," Ditka said of the play, "but he was having problems before that."

Unavailable for comment Monday, McMahon had said after the game that the Martin foul "didn't help" the injury.

NFL official Dick Maxwell said Sunday night the league automatically reviews plays involving ejections, and Martin faces a possible fine or suspension.

"But we will await review," he said.

"I did the wrong thing, true enough, and they took me out of the game for it," Martin said Sunday. "I think I got a little too rough."

"I just took him down," Martin said. "I wasn't thinking of shoulder injury or knee injury or anything."

Ditka said backup quarterback Mike Tomczak would start Sunday against Pittsburgh, adding, "We've got to get Doug Flutie ready to play in the next two weeks."

Flutie was acquired by the Bears from the Los Angeles Rams last month and has been learning the system.
